Adlai E. Stevenson lashed out at the "purveyors of cynical disillusion" who, he said were trying to undermine the nation's basic political structure. Mr. Stevenson, the chief United States representative to the United Nations, reports the New York Times, said extremists were endangering "the balance between the Supreme Court, the Presidency and Congress," a balance that "maintains our system."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the annual Stephen S. Wise awards dinner of the American Jewish Congress at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, Mr. Stevenson called attention to the Presidential campaign, saying:

"And if, at a time like this, we find the dialogue of democracy debased, if we find the whole dignity of the democratic process lowered to the level of a common brawl, then the safeguards of our freedom are in trouble."

Conduct a campaign "in an empty, unseemly, dishonest fashion," Mr. Stevenson said, "and the temper of the people at home and their reputation abroad can be scarred and weakened."

Mr. Stevenson did not single out or name the extremists and critics, but asserted that if any of the three branches of Government was "threatened with violent contempt, irresponsible attack, the Constitution itself is shaken."

"The Chief Justice," he added, "as fit for impeachment; a President submitted to the daily barrage of innuendo; a Congress despised for senescence and inactivity, all this goes far beyond the legitimate vigilance and becomes an attack upon constitutional freedom itself."

On frequent occasions, extreme right wing groups, including the John Birch Society, have called for the impeachment of Chief Justice Earl Warren and have attacked civil rights legislation, says the New York Times. A circular of the John Birch Society calls for the impeachment of Chief Justice Warren as one of its main planks.

Mr. Stevenson warned that "if a strong element in our society begins to bring to the inevitable processes of change and adaptation a spirit of violence and extremism, due process throughout society in the broadest sense is in jeopardy."

Here, he said, the extremism of the right and left have worked together, "because the evidence which united them was more significant than the differences that held them apart."

Extremism throughout history, Mr. Stevenson said, "has hatred walking at its side . . . today's extremism is no exception." He added:

"Lies, distortions, abuse, threats, violence — all these things spring from the dark side of the human psyche, where fear and the lust for power unleash on human society horrors which can end in the concentration camps and the gas chambers."

Earlier, Mr. Stevenson termed as "not very attractive" the use of a political campaign "to heap scorn on almost every aspect of American life, almost every category of Americans, almost every kind of American institution."

"The United States of America — for all its sins and shortcomings — is the most prosperous, the most dynamic — the most exciting and most creative society yet to be seen under the face of the sun," he declared.

Mr. Stevenson was presented with the organization's bronze medallion "for advancing human freedom." Joseph, Samuel and Michael Daroff, brothers, philanthropists, and leaders of the men's clothing industry, also received engraved bronze medallions "for strengthening Jewish life."

Rabbi Joachim Prinz, president of the American Jewish Congress, made the presentations, says the New York Times. Shad Polier, chairman of the organization's governing council, presided.

Israel Enters New Phase Of Cities Built For Security, Special Export Goods, Skilled Young Workers

More than 800 members of the Religious Zionists of America were told in New York that Israel is entering a "second phase" of industrial development that stresses new cities and production of sophisticated export goods. Addressing the group's 56th convention at the Promenade Hotel, says the New York Herald Tribune, Nachum Shamir, Israeli Economic Minister to the United States, said the current five-year economic crystal-gazing into Israel's future reveals a burgeoning country with a population of three million by 1970.

"The projection calls for doubling industrial production and tripling exports during the next five years," he said. "It also gives emphasis to continuing dispersal of industry to new development towns, to increasing our productivity and output, and to finding new sources of employment in industry for 100,000 additional workers."

Mr. Shamir and others on the program called attention to the "exciting new economic frontier" of new small cities, whether on the southern outskirts of Tel Aviv or in the barren wastes of Galilee or Negev.

One of these, a twenty-three million self-contained development called Kiryat Herzog, literally "City of Herzog," named for the late Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog of Israel, has been undertaken by the Religious Zionists of America in co-operation with the Jewish Agency and the Israeli government.

Situated on a ridge south of Tel Aviv and half [illegible] Herzog will provide co-operative middle-income apartments for the families of skilled young Jews, particularly those from the U.S. and Great Britain.

Joseph Ratner, New York attorney and chairman of the economic department of the Religious Zionists, said the project will provide "creative living in a religious setting" for American Orthodox families wishing to take up residence in Israel.

The map of Galilee has changed in recent weeks with the establishment of Carmiel, envisaged by the Israel Government as an industrial town of 50,000, says the London Times reporter from Tel Aviv. The first inhabitants have already moved into four-storey, functional blocks of flats in the rugged hills, and 40 families have now been accommodated.

Like much of Israel's development, Carmiel has been built for security and political reasons rather than economic considerations. There is no apparent economic justification for planting an industrial town in the undeveloped region between Acre and Safed, but the project is designed to advance the Government's programme of dispersing the population.

About 75 per cent of Israel's inhabitants and most of her industry are now crowded in the Mediterranean coastal strip, creating a twofold security problem. The closely settled coastal strip is excessively vulnerable to air attack and the thinly populated outlying regions may be difficult to defend. The hills of central Galilee, which border Lebanon and are inhabited 90 per cent by Arabs — including elements whose political sympathies lie beyond the borders — are a potent security risk.

Some 20,000 Arabs live within a six-mile radius of Carmiel, and there is only one Jewish settlement near, with 180 inhabitants. The Arabs have expressed mixed feelings about the new town. More than half the construction workers at Carmiel have been Arab villagers who previously travelled as much as 50 miles a day to work in [illegible] other coastal cities because [illegible] employ all the local labour.

Arabs have voiced satisfaction that the venture would bring progress to the region, but there has also been bitterness because Arab-owned lands have been expropriated for the town.

The 1,300 acres set aside for the town are largely barren, but Arab peasants from Deir el Assad, Banah and Nahf have raised grain, tobacco, sorghum and other unirrigated crops in some fertile pockets, says the London Times. There are also some olive trees and marble quarries within the town's limits. The Government has offered the Arabs monetary compensation or alternative land near by, but many have declined.

Bakri Ahmad of Baneh, said that some Arab villagers were motivated by political factors and would not accept alternative land or monetary compensation, no matter what was offered, others would come to terms if the Government offered a higher price. Said Ali Kassem of Nahf, also a mason, claimed he owned 22 dunams (five and a half acres) of fertile land near the Safed-Acre highway and had been offered £Is.250 (£30) a dunam; but he wanted eight times as much.

Mr. Kassem claimed that he used to plant wheat and barley before the rainy season and then sit back until the fields ripened. The crops had supported his wife, four children and his mother. He said he was now earning more as a mason in Carmiel, but the work was much harder. He would not in any circumstances accept the Government offer of land abandoned by Arab refugees in exchange for his fields.

Arab resistance to the expropriation was attributed by Yosef Almogi, Minister of Development and Housing, to intimidation by Arab

Columbia U. Names Famous Physicist, Nobel Laureate, To New Rank Of Highest Distinction

Columbia University has established the first university-wide professorships in its 210-year history and has named Dr. I. I. Rabi to one of the positions. Dr. Rabi, a Nobel laureate, has taught physics at Columbia for 35 years.

In announcing the creation of the new rank, called University Professor, Columbia said that it would be conferred on senior faculty members of the highest distinction, reports the New York Times. The post will allow its holders to work in whatever area they believe fruitful, without regard for departmental barriers.

A Columbia spokesman explained that the new position was created because "the arrangement seemed natural for someone — like Dr. Rabi — with such a broad background that he can cut across all disciplines.

"It does away with the need for setting up interdepartmental and interdisciplinary committees," it was explained.

A university professorship will be the highest faculty rank in Columbia and will carry commensurate remuneration. A professor will hold the position until his normal retirement date, but not more than three persons will bear the distinction simultaneously.

The spokesman said that a professor would not have to be on the Columbia faculty to be considered for the position. He also said that no further appointments would be made in the immediate future.

The concept of a University-wide Professor is not new. Many other schools, including most of those in the Ivy League, already have similar programs.

Dr. Rabi was [illegible] of Physics at Columbia before he received his new position. In 1944 he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics for his work in developing molecular beam resonance measurement of nuclear, molecular, and atomic properties.

As a University Professor, he will attempt to reduce the gap in instruction between the "Two Cultures," the natural and the social sciences, says the New York Times. He explained that "this does not mean that the teaching of the two should be combined but that there should be a greater penetration — science taught with a greater view toward history, sociology, and politics and other courses with a greater view toward science."

"So many of our best brains are now going into science — they must not be just technicians," Dr. Rabi declared. "Scientists have an increasingly great role to play in the affairs of the country and therefore have to be able to understand their science in the whole matrix of the life of the country."

Dr. Rabi, who is sixty-six years old, plans to organize informal faculty seminars to stimulate a greater inter action between the two fields.

At present, he does not teach any courses. He said he had not planned any specific ones for the near future, but hoped eventually to lead several seminars on the inter-relationships of the sciences and non-sciences.

In announcing the appointment, Dr. Grayson Kirk, Columbia's president, said:

"In the role of University Professor, the most distinguished teachers at Columbia will have greater freedom to pursue those educational goals they consider most fruitful. The appointment of Dr. Rabi as the first University Professor is especially satisfying. His eminence in scientific research is matched by his excellence in the classroom. As a University Professor he will more easily give voice to his ever-broadening interests."

Dr. Rabi has been a member and chairman of both the general advisory committee to the Atomic Energy Commission and the President's Science Advisory Committee and is now consultant-at-large for the latter group, says the New York Times. He is the United States member of the United Nations and NATO Science Committees.

The university announced that he had been made a sort of professor at large — the first of the kind at Columbia. He will no longer be academically confined to the Physics Department.

His blackboard is a symbol of what Dr. Rabi (pronounced Robby) describes as his chief concern: The alienation of science from the general culture. He does not want to build bridges between them; he wants them brought together, or "inter-penetrated" so that laymen will feel more at home in a scientific age.

The 66-year-old Nobel laureate has said that laymen tend to consider the scientist "a creature scattering antibiotics with one hand and atomic bombs with the other."

Every morning, the silver-haired physicist leaves his apartment at 450 Riverside Drive, overlooking the Hudson River, and strolls up a gentle slope to Pupin Hall, an old brick structure with limestone trim, where he takes a cage-like elevator to his eighth-floor office.

When he gets out of the elevator, his colleagues know he's coming because he hums or sings with a happy lilt. There is a red fire alarm box and bell next to his office door. Inside, it is large and plain — with a hard, rubber-tile floor, two huge windows, four globe-covered light bulbs, a brown radiator and a green couch stacked with learned journals.

When Dr. Rabi, who is very short, tilts back in his office chair, his legs are not long enough to reach the floor. He keeps, close, warm social relationships with his students, says the New York Times, sometimes treating small groups over cider and doughnuts.

He is an easily accessible don who keeps an open door, answers his own telephone and does most of his own filing. He gave up smoking seven years ago — "the happiest day of my life."

"I was just a creature of habit. I didn't enjoy it, but I had to have it," he said.

Dr. Rabi was born on July 29, 1898, in Rymanow in the old Austria-Hungary empire.

His father, David, a tailor, came to New York in 1899 with his wife and year-old son. He worked for a while in a Lower East Side sweatshop (the boy played in Hamilton Fish Park) and later moved to the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, where he ran a small grocery store.

Isador — Dr. Rabi now uses his initials and is known as I. I. Rabi — went to Public School 22 and Manual Training High School, but it was a Carnegie free library in Brooklyn that molded the boy who was to become one of the world's most eminent physicists.

"I was a kid who read a lot," he recalled. At 11 years old, he had read straight through the children's shelves and turned to the science shelf, beginning with a book about the Copernican theory. He "read through that shelf," too.

He was wedded to science, but he "knocked around for a long time" before settling on physics. In his first job with a chemical firm he analysed furniture polish and milk. He married Helen Newmark in 1926, a year before he got his Ph.D. at Columbia. They have two married daughters. He joined the faculty in 1929.

"I refuse to be a slave to apparatus," Dr. Rabi once told Shirley L. Quimby, professor emeritus of physics.

"He had ideas, but he just didn't like to push a screwdriver and a soldering iron to repair a leak in a vacuum system," Prof Quimby recalled to the New York Times. "So he would sit there whittling on a piece of wood while his boys worked on the equipment. He'd whittle one piece down to slivers, then start on another."

"Science is a great game, "Dr. Rabi has said. "It is inspiring and refreshing. The playing field is the universe itself."

He hopes now to encourage educators to teach science humanistically, not as an isolated scheme "with an assorted bag of tricks." He thinks science should be taught in relation to the great personalities who have affected it, to society, philosophy, and religion and its impact on its time.

It bothers him that, while political history is recorded "blow by blow," there are "no really great historians" of science to record the present revolution in jargonless prose. He regrets, too, that even minor literary figures have volumes of biography written about them, detailing their exploits and loves and foibles, while the scientist remains "an invisible man."

A cartoon on his office wall captures the alienation. It shows a matronly woman sitting on a couch with a friend, says the New York Times, and calling to her pipe-smoking husband in another room: "Edward, what was it you won that Nobel Prize for?"

Peter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Rubenovitch, 5783 Wolseley Avenue, will be called to the Reading of the Law, in honour of his bar-mitzvah, on November 21, at Beth Zion Synagogue. He is the brother of Sheldon, aged eleven years; and Lester, eight; grandson of Mrs. Annie Rozovsky, of Montreal, and the late Peter Rozovsky; and of Mrs. Dora Rubenovitch, of Montreal. Kiddush will be observed.

BIRTHS

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Berman (nee Shirley Segal, formerly of Montreal), of New York, on October 19, at the Booth Memorial Hospital, a son Jonathan Israel; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Berman, of Forest Hills, N.Y.; and of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Segal, 5281 Prince of Wales Avenue. Godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Berman, of New York, uncle, and aunt, Mr. Berman, and Mr. Segal, grandfathers, held the baby during the ceremony.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Rainer F. Wihl (nee Rae Greenberg), 430 Harris Street, on September 29, at the Jewish General Hospital, a son, David Jonathan; brother of Gary, aged eleven years; Joyce, nine; and Lloyd, six; grandson of Mrs. Sarah Greenberg, who is the godmother, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and of the late David Greenberg; and of Alexandre Wihl, 6300 Lennox Avenue, and of the late Mrs. Friedel Wihl. Godfather is Irving Greenberg, uncle, of Long Island, N. Y. Mr. Segal, uncle, held the baby during the ceremony.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Eichler (nee Lucy Blevinal), 4305 Carlton Avenue, on October 1, at the Jewish General Hospital, a son, Henry Josel; brother of Rebecca, aged three and one-half years; and of Susanne, two and one-half; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Eichler, 6762 Clanranald Avenue; and of Mrs. Mina Blevinal, 2495 Van Horne Avenue, and the late Henry Blevinal. Godparents are Mr. and Mrs. David Davidovitch, 5792 Wilderton Avenue. Mr. Eichler, grandfather, held the baby during the ceremony.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Sohmer, 2700 Soissons Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Charna Sohmer, to Mannie Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Young, 6405 De Vimy Avenue. The marriage will take place in June, 1965, at Zichron Kedoshim Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Nat. Kivenko, 6625 Macdonald Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Joy Anne Kivenko, to Bernard Silverman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Silverman, 5782 Wilderton Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Nat. Aronoff, 5647 Hutchison Street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rhoda Nancy Aronoff, to Howard Krakower, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Krakower, 7830 Wiseman Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Plaw, 536 Roslyn Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Liane Plaw, to Danny Taran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Taran, 6255 Northcrest Place.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shalit, 6247 Clanranald Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rona Shalit, to Murray Schwartz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schwartz, 4632 Mackenzie Street. The marriage will take place on September 12, 1965, at Beth Ora Synagogue. Mr. Schwartz is attending the University of Waterloo, in Waterloo, Ont., where he is working for the Master's degree in Psychology. Miss Shalit is in the fourth year at McGill University, faculty of Arts and Science.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Maislin, 1010 Markham Road, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marcia June Maislin, to Mel Stewart Jacoby, son of Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Jacoby, of Kew Garden Hills, New York, to take place on Sunday, December 20, at half-past five o'clock, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, Dr. Solomon Frank, Rabbi, officiating. Miss Maislin is a student in the faculty of Arts, at Roosevelt University, in Chicago, Ill. Mr. Jacoby is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and is a student at the Chicago Medical School.

MARRIAGES

PAPIERNICK - TEBLUM

The marriage of Miss Esther Teblum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Teblum, 6229 Mountain Sights Avenue, to Saul Papiernick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Papiernick, 5471 Trans Island Avenue, was solemnized at Young Israel Synagogue, on Sunday, August 9, at seven o'clock, by Rabbi Mendell Lewittes, assisted by Cantor Z. Halperin. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white, beaded, peau de soie made with a fitted, lace bodice; round neckline; three-quarter-length sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt with a cathedral train, extending from the waist. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion, was arranged with a seed-pearl-beaded crown; and she carried a prayer book with white stephanotis. Miss Ann Teblum was her sister's maid of honour. She wore a pink, silk shantung and lace gown which had a lace jacket; also a matching tiara; and her flowers were a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaids were: Misses Sarah Teblum, sister of the bride; and Eleanor Papiernick, sister of the groom. Miss Teblum was in a sleeveless, pink, lace and crepe, sheath gown; and had a pink tiara. Miss Papiernick was in a sleeveless, pink, crepe sheath gown; made with a beaded overblouse; and tunic skirt appliqued with rhinestones, and seed-pearl-beads. Her hat matched it. Each had a cascade bouquet of white and pink carnations. Norman Boman was his cousin's best man. The ushers were: Israel Teblum, brother of the bride; Gaby Blum, Allan Beitel, cousins of the bride; Harold Papiernick, Bernard Greenspan, cousins of the groom; Bernard Burin, Paul Skolnick, Kenneth Friedman, Mickey Macklin, Fred Firestone, Allan Abramson, and Mark Kotler. The setting of the wedding was composed of pink, white, and blue carnations, gladioli, and chrysanthemums. The wedding music was played by an orchestra. Two hundred and sixty guests were received in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Teblum, mother of the bride, wore a blue, peau de soie sheath gown, the bodice of which was beaded, and its own jacket; also a matching, pill-box hat; with a corsage of white, and pink carnations. Mrs. Papiernick, mother of the groom, was in a sleeveless, silver-coloured, lace gown, set over blue peau de soie; with sheath skirt and short train. She had a matching hat; and a corsage of pink baby roses. Mr. and Mrs. Saul Papiernick spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida, travelling via Eastern Air Lines, the bride departing in a blue, linen suit; with a corsage of white carnations. They have taken up residence at [illegible] Emerald Avenue. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Max Blitenthal, of New York, uncle, and aunt of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Noaye, cousins of the groom; Harry Grossman, president of the Baker's Union, in Toronto; and Mrs. Grossman; and Mr. and Mrs. Moishe Epstein; all of Toronto, Ont.

CARD OF THANKS

MANDELZYS:

In the midst of their sorrow the family of the late Issie David Mandelzys, wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to their many relatives, friends, and neighbours, for the many acts of kindness and messages of sympathy shown them during their recent bereavement, and donations made in memory of their dearly beloved husband, father, brother, and son-in-law.

Social Notes — Montreal

Mr. and Mrs. Issie Goodman, 5773 Wolseley Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Herbie, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Beth Zion Synagogue. He is the brother of Stanley Edward, aged sixteen years; grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Herscovitch; and of Mrs. Hinda Goodman, 6420 Somerled Avenue, and the late Jacob Goodman. Kiddush was observed. That afternoon, in the Synagogue hall, Mr. and Mrs. Issie Goodman, were luncheon hosts to eighty guests. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke. Cantor Tibor Holczer asked the blessing over the wine. Arrangements of red, white and yellow carnations adorned the hall. Here for the celebration were: Mrs. Irving Einaugler, aunt, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gumer, and Sharma, and Arthur, of Great Neck, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hirsh, of Quebec City, Quebec; all cousins. Mr. and Mrs. Issie Goodman entertained at home for the out-of-town guests and for the immediate family.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Tarnofsky, 5400 Walkley Avenue, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at a dinner, with forty-five guests, at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Manny Finkelstein (Katie), 2380 Decelles Avenue. They have two other sons-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Greenstone (Sylvia), 1450 Beverley Crescent; and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Lifchitz (Eva), of Hamilton, Ont.; and a son and daughter-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Ben. Tarnofsky, 8017 Birnam Avenue. They have ten grandchildren: Susan and Brenda Finkelstein, Sharon and Barbara Greenstone, Bernard, Janice Shelley and Frances Lifchitz; and Judy and Norma Tarnofsky. Mrs. Tarnofsky is the former Miss Ida Taub; and has a sister, Mrs. S. Snider (Goldie), of Toronto, Ont.; and a brother, William Taub, of Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Tarnofsky has three sisters, Mrs. Abe Malinsky (Faiga); Mrs. J. Lerner (Goldie); and Mrs. Jack Snitzer (Katie), all of Toronto, Ont. At the dinner, Mrs. Tarnofsky wore a royal blue silk dress, with a corsage of cream-coloured orchids. There was a white, and gold-coloured cake, arranged with red carnations. Here for the celebration were: Mrs. Lifchitz, and Bernard, Janice, Shelley, and Frances; Mr. and Mrs. Jake Lerner, and Mrs. Jack Snitzer, brother-in-law and sisters of Mr. Tarnofsky; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fine, nephew and niece of Mrs. Tarnofsky; and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Berezin, nephew and niece of Mr. Tarnofsky; and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Strauss, of Buffalo, N. Y., nephew and niece of Mrs. Tarnofsky.

Mr. and Mrs. Nat Berger, 6830 Chester Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Allan Ralph, who was called to the Reading of the Law, in honour of his bar-mitzvah, at Shaare Zedek Synagogue. He is the brother of Barbara, aged fourteen years; and Cynthia Francine, three; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bigler, 5480 Walkley Avenue; and of Mrs. Freda Berger, 5019 Park Avenue, and the late Abraham Berger. Kiddush was observed. Mrs. Berger wore a pink, tweed suit; with a velvet hat. Barbara wore a blue, wool dress; and a blue hat. Mrs. Freda Berger was in a black wool suit; with a black hat. Mrs. Bigler wore a blue, wool suit; and blue hat. The same evening, Mr. and Mrs. Berger were hosts to two hundred and forty guests at a dinner dance in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Berger was in a white, peau de soie gown, with blue embroidery; and had a corsage of white orchids. Barbara wore a champagne-coloured, peau de soie dress. Mrs. Bigler wore a blue, silk, sheath gown. Mrs. Berger wore a blue, satin gown. Each had a corsage of white carnations. The family sat at the head-table. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke. A blue and white cake; and bronze-coloured, and gold-toned carnations, and pom-poms beautified the table. Here for the celebration were: Mr. and Mrs. I. Waxman, of New York, great-uncle, and great-aunt; Mr. and Mrs. George Crystal, of Binghampton, N.Y., cousins; Dr. and Mrs. N. Schacmett, of Riverdale, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Levin, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Roy F. Frankel, of Toronto, Ont.

BIRTHS

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. David Bloom (nee Myrtle Tattlebaum), 1065 Korman Street, on August 27, at the Jewish General Hospital, a son, Matthew Steven, brother of Lynn, aged fourteen years; and Marla, ten. Godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Cohen, of Montreal, great-uncle, and great-aunt. Carl Isaacs, great-uncle, 4120 Van Horne Avenue, held the baby during the ceremony.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. David Luterman (nee Rachel Kramer), 5561 Bradford Place, on October 31, at the Jewish General Hospital, a daughter, Rosalind Ann; sister of Gerald Luterman, Arnold Luterman; Leonard, aged twelve years; and Maynard, five; granddaughter of Mrs. Dinah Kramer, 4830 St. Kevin Street, and of the late E. Kramer; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Luterman, of Montreal.

"WUNDER BABBA"

By Sanford H. Margolith, in the Jewish Frontier

When I was young and lived in my grandmother's house with its sweet smell of bread baking, I somehow got the idea that Jerusalem was white and warm. But I have since been there, and Jerusalem is pink and rose and for some weeks in winter very cold indeed. My grandmother gave me many strange ideas about the Holy Land, God and life, and before that day when I was thirteen and came home to find her room cluttered with oxygen tanks and she — dead — shriveled beneath one of her immaculately clean bedsheets, she had taught me how to ward off influenza (wear a sack of camphor hanging from your neck), how to save oneself during a pogrom (retire quickly to the fruit cellar and there push a rolling pin back and forth over a table top: this will sound like approaching horsemen to the vodka-crazed Cossacks pillaging your home and they will flee), and how to cross the Russian border undetected (hide deep in the middle of a wagon load of hay safe from the probing bayonets of the border guards). These things she taught me, and other wonderous things, none of which I have yet had the opportunity to put to use.

I remember her best sitting before the open window that looked out over Sea Breeze Park and the handball courts, where young shirtless men, their bodies burnished copper by the summer sun, sweated after the hard black balls ricocheting off the friable concrete slabs, and beyond over Brighton's contraceptive-littered beach to the gray and angry sea. Asthma was bleeding the last reserves of oxygen from her surrendering lungs and she would stop reading the Bible in her lap for a moment to turn her furrowed blue lips toward the ocean and wheeze in the air so hard for her to come by.

I used to think as I came into her room and catch her at this that she was sucking in the rejuvenating breeze all the way from the beloved Palestine she never did or would see. It is only now that I suspect she was trying to recapture the cooler Slavic air she breathed in her youth — air that had sustained her through the crushing life she had led in that nameless Russian village from which my mother's family had emerged — neither entirely Russian, nor entirely Jewish — robbed somehow of a couple of thousand years between Canaan and Coney Island.

The legend of my grandmother has grown to limitless proportions since her death. In my family she has taken on all the aspects of an emerging saint. Were we Catholics, I am sure my mother and my aunts would already be exploring those preliminary steps that lead to canonization. As it is, they are content to think of her as some kind of wunder bubba, a woman of immense spiritual powers, capable perhaps of interceding for one with God. In this there is a streak of Oriental ancestor worship in our family that will disappear only with the death of every one of us who remembers her.

Even I, heretic, American, off-Broadway theater-goer, friend of abstract painters and atheists, fall silent with respect when my mother, my Aunt Jassie, Sarah or Esther interrupt a conversation with the words, "Mamma used to say . . ." The memory of her haunts my consciousness and disturbs my philosophical cynicism. For it was she (and God knows only she would have had the audacity to have even thought it) who said to me the day before she died, "Very soon I will be seeing God in person, and when I do I will say to Him — right to His face — You take good care of my grandson — and He had better, yes, He had better."

I remember how I had shrunk from these words bristling with blasphemy. Where did that kind of courageous intimacy with God come from? Certainly not from the synagogues of Brighton Beach. I had been in them, and I had not found Him among the shnapps and honeycake on the long white tablecloth Sabbath table in the entrance halls, the cacophonous babble of unanswered prayers, the snuff pinching and beard tugging, the creaking daises and dank catacomb odors. Still, what Christian of even the highest ecclesiastical order would dare speak of God as if he were a rich cousin from whom one could demand favors?

My grandmother was small and frail, and except for her bluish lips and yellowing henlike fingers, gray all over. She was an ancient sparrow, her arms beat back like now useless wings, her nose a cracked beak, too old to peck among the largesse of newer, more expertly tended gardens. She was grounded by the tyranny of time and condemned by cut-rate doctors to face only the salt-tinged breeze that reached her window from somewhere beyond Sandy Hook and Rockaway Point. Only in her eyes was there a hint of a former youthfulness; they were newly-manufactured ball bearings, shining hard and gray black, the color of Brooklyn streets after a summer shower.

She was judge and oracle of a burgeoning family, and though her pronouncements be those of another, now forgotten world, it was she after all who had burst into a Russian general's tent and convinced him to discharge her husband long before his twelve years service in the Czar's army was over. And it was her power of argument that had whiplashed my grandfather out of his enthusiasm for the Bolshevik revolution and back to his small corner of the West Third Street shul. As they must, my memories of her fade as the sepia in long-misplaced daguerreotypes. The stories of her way with words and her feats of near magic grow more incredible each year. Perhaps it is because God is stronger in Brooklyn than he is in the conference rooms of Madison Avenue or the pickled wood conversation pits of Great Neck. I don't know. Yet I console myself with half-remembered incidents in which she grappled with America and somehow emerged unchanged.

There was that time that she finally gave in to the entreaties of the half-mad nextdoorika Mrs. Schuster. My grandmother's asthma was beginning to overpower

THE JEW AND THE RACIAL CRISIS

By Shad Polier, New York attorney; author of a weekly civil-rights and civil-liberties newsletter; chairman of the National Governing Council of the American Jewish Congress.

(This provocative article is by a prominent New York lawyer, author of a weekly civil-rights and civil-liberties newsletter, who is Chairman of the National Governing Council of the American Jewish Congress.)

We are in for a period of increasing anti-Semitism among Negroes. This development was almost inevitable. It is important to understand why this is so. It is even more important to understand its significance for the Jewish community. It is most important, however, to understand how the Jewish community should and should not deal with this phenomenon.

The points of friction which provoke and exacerbate Negro anti-Semitism are obvious enough. The relationship of landlord and tenant, of shopkeeper and customer in the slum areas, of employer and employee in households, and in many marginal industries, all these provide tinder easily ignited in the superheated atmosphere of the Negro revolution. The resentment and hostility by Negroes against white persons in these dominant positions should come as no surprise to anyone.

Regardless of the merits of the particular landlord, the particular merchant or the particular employer, he represents to the Negro the white exploiter, the white who lives and battens upon the Negro's helplessness. In striking back or, more accurately, striking out against the Jew, the Negro is assaulting a white world which he believes has short-changed him and which he believes is determined to take advantage of him.

Efforts of the Communists in the depression years of the 1930's to win Negro adherents understandably failed. The Negro is not in revolt against the capitalistic system. He is in revolt against the white community because the whites have denied and are denying him full partnership in that system and its economic and social blessings.

A degree of bitterness naturally inheres in [illegible] conflict. One of its natural by-products is the Black Nationalist movement. It would be almost inconceivable that this particular form of extremism should not develop under the terrible pressures of a people seeking freedom and equality. It may perhaps help us as Jews to understand this movement. Offhand, we may regard it as utterly alien to Jews. Yet let us remember a phenomenon in recent Jewish history. To the British people, the Stern gang in Israel was no less extremist than the Black Muslims are in the eyes of the American people.

Nor does it change matters to say that the Stern gang was fighting for political freedom, or that it was fighting to open the doors so that tens and even hundreds of thousands of Jews who had survived the hell of Nazism could enter into the promised land. The Negroes are also fighting for entry into a promised land and to escape the degradation and deprivations of second-class citizenship.

The Jews of Israel overwhelmingly repudiated the Stern gang and placed their trust in the Haganah. So, too, the overwhelmingly majority of the Negroes of America repudiate Elijah Mohamed and Malcolm X, his former disciple and now the would-be new prophet of Negro nationalism. Instead, the American Negro turns for leadership and places his trust in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, in the NAACP, in CORE, in the Urban League, in the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

None of these organizations is tainted with anti-Semitism at the national level. On the contrary, as national organizations they are profoundly concerned over the development of anti-Semitism. They realize the corrosive and negative consequences of anti-Semitism among Negroes. Their national leaders, the responsible heads of the Negro struggle for civil rights, are fully aware of the Jewish contribution to that struggle, and the tragic consequences that would result if Negro and Jew were to be pitted against one another.

Negro anti-Semitism, like anti-Semitism elsewhere, is essentially the result of a search for a scapegoat, for someone upon whom the Negro's sense of frustration can be vented. Certainly it should come as no surprise that anti-Semitism is seized upon by Negro demagogues who employ it in their unprincipled fight to achieve and hold positions of leadership in local communities.

If these local leaders offered their members nothing more than anti-Semitism they would, of course, be vulnerable to action by their national leadership. Indeed, if their local activities consisted only of anti-Semitism there would be no need for intervention by national leaders. Their own local constituents would soon recognize the emptiness and futility of such programs.

The difficulty arises out of the fact that many of these local leaders have also wrapped themselves in a cloak of militancy. They have advocated programs going far beyond what their national leaders believe sound or wise or productive. In so doing they have sought to "out-militate" national leadership.

In my view, Negro anti-Semitism is neither pervasive nor is it likely to be enduring. Like Black Nationalism, it touches only a tiny fraction of Negroes. Like Black Nationalism it is, I believe, a passing phase. I would characterize both Negro anti-Semitism and Black Nationalism as sterile concepts offering only blind alleys leading to nowhere. I am confident that the Negro will recognize that this is the case.

I do not dismiss Negro anti-Semitism. But I am equally concerned lest Jews react to it by alienating themselves from the struggle for racial justice.

Jews can point to the fact that their national organizations have joined together with all of the other liberal forces in this country to secure the enactment of anti-discrimination legislation. We can point to the fact that in the fight for the enactment of an adequate Federal civil rights bill Jewish organizations have been among the important voices supporting such legislation. We can point to the fact that no rabbis have invoked the word of God to excuse segregation. We can point to the fact that those Jews who have abused their positions as landlords, as merchants or as employers have acted no differently from any other white persons.

It is important that Jews point to these things. But it is equally important for Jews to realize that it will take time for these things to be seen by Negroes and to be listened to by Negroes. What troubles me is the danger that the individual Jew will become bitter, that he will become hostile, that he will divorce himself from the great struggle which is not a Negro struggle but an American struggle, the struggle for human equality and human dignity.

Such bitterness, hostility and alienation can only be self-defeating. It can serve only to fuel the fires of anti-Semitism. Out of that crucible will pour anti-Negroism, a product no less terrible than anti-Semitism. The victim will not be the Negro, he will be the Jew, corrupted and scarred because he will have forsaken the most precious precepts of his religion.

I am concerned lest these things happen to the Jew. I have faith that they will not happen. I have that faith because I believe that, given insight and understanding, the Jew will not betray his heritage. There is one aspect of the racial crisis which, it seems to me, may become the touchstone of the Jewish response to the Negro struggle for full equality and dignity.

There is no Jewish hostility to the upward movement of the Negro toward full participation in the economic benefits of American society. In part this is accounted for by our position in the economic structure, as a result of which the Negro is not a competitor for jobs. There is, however, an even more fundamental reason for the absence of hostility. We Jews believe that there is room in America to provide a full economic life for everyone. Indeed, we welcome the Negro's emergence into fuller participation in our economic life, just as we urge that our country's doors be open to persons of other lands who seek to enter to enjoy a better life, although relatively few Jews will seek entry.

What I have said of employment is, I believe, essentially true of housing. I should doubt that Jews are concerned by the movement of Negroes into their neighborhood because they are Negroes. They are concerned lest the onward movement of Negroes bring persons of a lower economic and social status and threaten the spread of slums. I venture to say, however, that the reaction would be no different if those who were moving into the neighborhood were white persons of the same economic, social, and educational level as Negroes.

But there is one area of integration in which there is deep concern and great apprehension on the part of many Jews, the current turmoil over efforts to end racial imbalance in the public schools. Here again, I am confident, the problem is not one of color.

No matter how much we Jews have been effected and influenced by the attitudes of our countrymen, we remain relatively immunized to racial prejudice. This is true because, unlike some others, we cherish our history of oppression and teach it to our children. We make it a part of our most sacred holidays. We humbly remind ourselves and teach our children that we were once slaves unto Pharaoh. We believe in the good things for all men regardless of their race, their color, or their creed. We recognize that education is the veritable "open sesame" to the modern world.

But there is a great distance between the Seder table and the public school. Because we are human, we are unwilling, or at least reluctant, to extend benefits to the children of others if we think it will be at the expense of our own.

We have, I believe, fallen into the trap — together with the rest of the white community, of believing that public school integration in the North must necessarily be harmful to our own children. This approach on the part of the white community, of which we Jews are a part, seems to me to reflect a misconception of American society, a lack of understanding of the potentialities of American life, a lack of confidence in the possibilities of our country.

This attitude, which we too often share with the rest of the white community, rests upon a basic fallacy. It is comparable to the gross error of the Marxists who regarded class war as inevitable because they thought there was just so much wealth and income to go around. They reasoned, therefore, that progress could be achieved only by class war in which the proletariat, the dispossessed, would take over the instruments of production.

The Western world has shown that in an advanced economic society there is an alternative which provides both the blessings of plenty and the blessings of freedom and human dignity.

Today, particularly in education, the white community has fallen into the same conceptual error as far as public school integration is concerned. The white community has been increasingly aware of the inadequacies of the present educational system. It has drawn the conclusion, a false conclusion, that our public schools, already inadequate, will be gravely and inevitably damaged by introducing into white schools Negro children who have been socially, economically, educationally, and emotionally disadvantaged.

What the white community, and this includes the Jewish community, fails to see is that it is not a question of just so much education to go around, but rather that our society is rich enough and skilled enough to provide quality education for all children without penalising any of them. But to do so, we must greatly strengthen our school system, build new school buildings in areas where de facto segregation will be minimized, provide more and better teachers, auxiliary services for remedial reading, enriched programs for integrated schools, and similar services. The fact is that with enough will and enough funds, miracles can be wrought in giving equal and quality education to every child.

The approach to this problem, I would urge, requires first and foremost a change of attitude. We Jews should be the first to realize this. For we know, or should know, that the problem America faces today in the North in school integration is basically no different from the problem the people of Israel face as they seek to absorb and to prepare for equal citizenship the children of families from non-European lands. Those children and their parents have come to Israel with all of the economic, social, and educational handicaps with which the Negro has come into our Northern cities. Indeed, in terms of dimensions, our American problem is relatively small. More than half of all the children in Israel below high school are from disadvantaged homes and family backgrounds.

There is, of course, a difference in the situation in Israel. It is illustrated by a recent conversation between Moshe Kol, head of Israel's Youth Aliyah movement, and an American visitor, non-Jewish, to whom he had explained what Israel is doing for children from Arab lands. The visitor listened and exclaimed, "Why, you have just the same problem we have." To which Kol replied, "But there is a difference; we welcome these children and their families. They are our brothers."

Israel, with all of its tremendous economic problems, has chosen to tax itself heavily to provide the funds, the plant, the services, and staff to solve its integration problem, which has many times the dimensions of our problem here. Israel has done so without lowering educational standards and without taking anything from pupils who do not need the extra help that is given to Israel's own disadvantaged children. Israel is doing so not only out of a sense of brotherhood but because it realizes the consequences of grudging, half-hearted measures.

Can not we Americans, Jews and Gentiles, white and Negro, learn from Israel's example? Is it not clear that massive financial resources are required to enable us speedily and effectively to provide integrated education now? Has it not become apparent that we can no longer regard Federal aid to education as an issue to be resolved some day rather than today?

Would it not be well for Negroes and whites to join together not only for public school integration but also for good integrated schools? Would it not be constructive if the Negro community issued a statement addressed to the Catholic cardinals, archbishops, and bishops who have doomed Federal aid to education by laying down the condition that parochial schools must also benefit? Has the moment not come to stop fighting over what is not enough and rather join hands to provide a full educational fare for all children?

We can make an important contribution as a Jewish community if we take the leadership in seeking to form a coalition of whites and Negroes to secure the means needed to solve this vital and critical problem of de facto school segregation. For the time has arrived for the Negro community to realize that it is not enough to picket the Board of Education or even City Hall but that all of us, Negro and white, must concentrate on those Northern members of the House Rules Committee, Democrats and Republicans, who have bottled up the Federal aid-to-education bill.

Now that the civil rights bill is law, may we not hope that the coalition of religious, civic, labor, and other groups that led the fight for enactment will extend its efforts to winning enactment of a measure that would bring Federal funds into the effort to make equal education synonymous with equality in education?

Faced with the threat of being nationalists. He said the compensation offered by the Government was fair and the alternative land offered compared favourably in quality and location.

In planning Carmiel's economic basis, the authorities have taken into account the Arab neighbours. Adam Tal, head of the team building the town, said industry and construction were expected to employ 12,000 Jews and 4,000 Arabs, while another 8,000 persons will be employed in services. The population is expected to reach 50,000 in 20 years.

The Government has offered special incentives to industrial enterprises. Mr. Tal said a £Is.2,400,000 plan for instant foods and breakfast cereals, which is to employ more than 400 workers, will receive a long-term Government loan of £Is.1,500,000, with land at a nominal rent, tax exemptions and other privileges. The Government will also pay half the salaries of unskilled Carmielites until they master their crafts, says the London Times. Similar conditions will be offered to other enterprises.

Carmiel, like the Negev desert town of Arad, marks a departure in Israel urban development, Mr. Almogi said in an interview. Previously, new towns had been built by and for new immigrants, who were generally taken direct from harbours and airports and employed in building more houses for more immigrants. As building tapered off, industries were lured to the towns to provide work.

In Carmiel and Arad, the first settlers were veteran Israelis. It is planned to maintain a 50-50 ratio between old settlers and immigrants.

The main inducement for old-timers to move to the new city is housing on easy terms. It is almost impossible to rent apartments in Israel and families living in cramped quarters frequently have scant hopes of raising the large sums needed to buy bigger dwellings. Carmiel and Arad have opened new vistas for these people.

The first settlers in Carmiel included a couple with seven children who had been living in one room in Haifa. Apart from families seeking larger homes, the vanguard included newly married couples and discharged soldiers as well as families who had abandoned kibbutzim (collective settlements) to start new lives.

Mr. Almogi said the Government's policy is to enlarge existing development towns and to plan new ones for populations of 50,000 to 60,000. Experience had shown that smaller towns did not warrant such facilities as high schools, theatres, cultural centres or even competitive cinemas, says the London Times. By building planned industrial cities like Carmiel and Arad, the Minister said, it was hoped to make possible pioneering in comfort.

THE RACIAL CRISIS

outdistanced by the Soviet Union, our country quickly moved to close the missile gap by pouring tens of millions of dollars into the enrichment of our educational system in the field of science. Today we are faced by an enormously greater and no less dangerous gap, the educational chasm that separates the Negro child from the white child and that threatens our viability as a nation and our future as a leader of the free world. In the face of this challenge, the Federal government must play its proper role. Toward this end, men and women of good will and abiding concern cannot be silent.

The day of victory for human freedom and dignity will, I believe, come sooner and more certainly if every Jew enlists with mind and heart. To do otherwise is to default in our obligations as citizens and to sully our Jewish integrity. I believe we shall play our part at this historic moment.

Munich: Fine meals in restaurants like these cost less than $2.00.

Rome: Sightseeing included in the KLM "$5-a-Day" plan.

Tour Europe on KLM's amazing "u.s.$5-a-Day" plan. Read why it's best to start in friendly Amsterdam:

NEW LOW 21-DAY FARES*

You can now enjoy the savings of special low 21-day economy class excursion fares through the Winter.

*Subject to Government approval.

It's amazing, but true! You can actually tour 22 cities in Europe, including London, Paris and Rome, and spend no more than U.S. $5 a day for room, breakfast and sightseeing. KLM shows you how. You stay in clean, comfortable, conveniently-located hotels. You avoid expensive frills. Begin in hospitable Amsterdam and receive FREE—Ten Dutch Treats, Seven Special Introductions, and Unlimited Sightseeing!

1. A low-cost, $5-a-Day European tour is not for the tourist who demands the utmost in service and surroundings, who insists on staying at the very best hotels. It is for the unpretentious Canadian who is willing to live in the same style as that of the European tourist. The hotels that form part of the $5-a-Day system are clean, comfortable, and utterly respectable. They cater to families and to Europeans of all ages. But they lack frills. In some of these hotels, you'll have breakfast at the dining room table of the very European family that owns, operates and lives in the hotel. In many of these hotels, you'll have to share a bath with an adjoining room or rooms. In some, you'll find stairs only and no elevator. (Most European hotels are small.) But throughout your $5-a-Day tour, you'll encounter warmth, friendliness and a totally European outlook on life.

2. What you'll receive. For each of the cities on your tour, you'll receive a reservation at a carefully-selected budget class hotel. You'll also receive a breakfast for your $5-a-Day payment, and you'll receive—in each city—at least one, and in Amsterdam as many free sightseeing tours as you care to take. Your only additional cost will be the lunch and dinner which you yourself will purchase at any one of several recommended budget-priced restaurants, and personal expenses.

3. How to plan your vacation. A $5-a-Day trip is not an escorted tour. You plan your own itineraries, determine the number of days you will stay in each city, and also determine the dates on which you will depart and return. But a $5-a-Day tour is a prepaid tour—once you have made your $5-a-Day payment, you need pay nothing else in Europe—other than for lunches, dinners, transfers, and personal expenses.

4. Simply multiply by $5. To sign on for a $5-a-Day tour, stop in at your local Travel Agent or KLM office and choose your trip from any of the itineraries outlined in the KLM folder "Europe on $5-a-Day". All you have to do is to determine the number of days you wish to stay in each European city, then multiply the total number of days of your trip by $5 and pay the resulting sum to your Travel Agent or KLM office.

5. Make Amsterdam your European Gateway. You'll find Amsterdam an ideal starting point. From Amsterdam Airport, you have a choice of several flights every day to London, Paris, Hamburg and several per week to Rome. London and Paris are only an hour away. Rome, two hours and five minutes. Frankfurt, one hour.

6. A new KLM booklet containing complete, detailed information on how you can see Europe on $5 a day is available. It gives you facts about the cities you can visit, the hotels in which you stay—exactly what you get for your $5. Whether you have already decided that this is your year to see Europe, or you are still just thinking about it, you'll find this booklet invaluable. Check coupon below for your free copy.

7. Rely on your Travel Agent—he is an expert. Your Travel Agent will help you with all your travel arrangements. For detailed information on rates, hotels, fares, reservations, connections, tours, multilingual guides and interpreters, documents, and currencies, see your Travel Agent.

FREE! TEN "DUTCH TREATS" THAT WELCOME YOU TO AMSTERDAM:

(October 15, 1964—March 15, 1965)

When you begin your European $5-a-Day tour in friendly, hospitable Amsterdam, you are treated as a guest of the city. To welcome you, and to show its appreciation of your visit, the Amsterdam Tourist Association invites you to accept these gifts:

1. A Dutch Lunch. Tasty Dutch sandwiches, with milk or coffee at the "Van Dobben" broodjeswinkel (sandwich shop).

2. A Visit to the Rijksmuseum. Where you will see the world's greatest collection of Rembrandts, including his "Night Watch", as well as other Dutch masterpieces.

3. A Visit to the Municipal Museum. World-famous for its fine collection of contemporary art, including many priceless Van Goghs, at Paulus Potterstraat 13.

4. A Visit to "Rembrandthuis". The house where Rembrandt lived and worked has been preserved and is now a fascinating museum containing many rare drawings and sketches.

5. A Boat Ride through Amsterdam's Canals. See the city from one of Bergmann's glass-topped boats as you cruise the network of historic canals and glide under some of Amsterdam's 636 bridges.

6. A Welcome-drink at one of Amsterdam's leading hotels or restaurants. Drop in at the Amstel Hotel, the Amsterdam Hilton, the Apollo Hotel, or the Hotel Krasnapolsky.

7. An Elegant Dinner. Dine at the picturesque "Vijff Vlieghen" (Five Flies), for superb continental cuisine; or Indonesian Ricetable at the Lido Restaurant. A pre-dinner cocktail is included.

8. Concertgebouw Orchestra Concert. A free ticket to a performance of this world-famous orchestra will be available to you if a concert is scheduled in Amsterdam when you are there.

9. Nightlife in Amsterdam. Introduction, cover charge, and one free drink of your choice at one of the following establishments: "The Blue Note", "Extase", "Femina", "Lido Bar".

10. Souvenir Dutch Cigars. Famous Dutch Willem II cigars, especially packed as a souvenir to take home.

YOU'LL ALSO RECEIVE THESE SPECIAL INTRODUCTIONS:

When you arrive in friendly Amsterdam, you will also receive FREE a booklet of special introductions to these and other fascinating places:

1. An invitation to visit the Van Moppes Diamond Cutting Works. See skillful diamond cutters at work, and afterwards have a chance to buy brilliant gems at savings.

2. An invitation to visit the Anne Frank House. The spirit of this brave young girl lives on in this carefully preserved house. At Prinsengracht 263.

3. A visit to the famous Amstel Brewery. See the brewery where it is made and enjoy a couple of glasses of cool, golden beer. Or take them at any café or restaurant where Amstel beer is served.

4. Famous Heineken Holland Beer. Visit the modern brewery in Amsterdam, where you are welcome Mondays through Fridays, between 10:00 and 10:30 a.m.

5. A Visit to the Fashion House of Ferry Offerman. Amsterdam's couturier on the way up. See his showrooms, buy at discounts.

UNLIMITED SIGHTSEEING IN AMSTERDAM:

(October 1, 1964—March 31, 1965)

Here's another bonus you get for stopping over in lively Amsterdam for a minimum of two nights on your starting $5-a-Day tour of Europe. You'll receive a "pass" entitling you to as many of Amsterdam's interesting city sightseeing tours and excursions as you may wish to take in. And as often as you wish. Tours like these:

1. A boat ride through the canals of Amsterdam: You glide along the quiet canals of this "Venice of the North", under scores of bridges. Your motor launch will take you through the major sections of Amsterdam—and then into its busy harbor—one of the world's largest.

2. A sightseeing bus tour of Amsterdam: Via motorcoach, escorted by a multi-lingual guide, you'll pass along every major street, visit every important section of the city. And you'll stop to see the great Rijksmuseum, and a diamond cuttery.

3. A trip to picturesque Marken and Volendam: By motorcoach and ferry boat, you'll be taken to two of the Netherlands' most charming villages, where the inhabitants still wear wooden shoes and traditional clothing. You'll visit a model farm where famous Edam cheese is made.

4. The Hague and Delft: A motorcoach drive through the clean, sparkling countryside of Holland, with its many windmills, canals and beautiful fields. You'll visit the fascinating flower auctions, and meet the craftsmen who create the world-famous blue-and-white Delft china.

her resistance and she knew as we all did, but refused to speak of it, that it was only a matter of a few months until there would be no more air for her to breathe. The doctors had gravely pronounced the pre-death words to my mother and aunts, "I don't know how she lasts: she is an amazing woman." They were not fooled by this. It was the euphemistic death sentence that always preceded the final, meticulously itemized medical bill.

Mrs. Schuster was the scourge of the neighborhood. The first to scream at us to stop our accursed stickball playing outside her window lest she call the police, Not the cop on the beat, but higher, the Eighth Street Police Station, which meant squad cars and fat faced, uncompromising cops who would just as soon smack you with a nightstick as look at you. Mrs. Schuster had been converted to Christian Science, and was forever shrieking, "God be with you!" down the hall as her twenty-year-old daughter Mildred left for City College where she was studying to be a grade-school teacher — the final refuge of the Jewish homely.

Although Mrs. Schuster could speak hardly one word of unaccented English, her words "God be with you!" were so perfectly pronounced, so excellently enunciated, one would think they were uttered by an Episcopalian Minister in Bronxville. It rankled the tenants of our apartment building beyond all speaking of it, and was talked of bitterly in appetizer stores and whispered about with rancor wherever Jews encountered each other from Manhattan Beach to Gravesend Bay.

Mrs. Schuster had woman trouble. I hadn't the faintest notion at thirteen precisely what that was or how grave it was, but had overheard her tell my grandmother when they met in the hallway one day that all the great American doctors failed to cure her, even "a professor" (as specialists were then known among us) at the Coney Island Hospital. She had tried everything, every cure ancient and modern to no avail. Then one day Mrs. Astinian, whose husband was the janitor of the apartment house across the street, told her how Christian Science had cured her boils. Mrs. Schuster was skeptical at first, but after much soul searching tried it. No praying to Jesus was necessary, she later assured my grandmother; it had all been simple, very simple. A Christian Scientist had called, asked her to believe in God, and her troubles would go away. It had worked, and today her woman trouble was gone and she was living out her last years without pain or any infirmity.

For many months Mrs. Schuster oppressed my grandmother with tales of her miraculous Christian Science cure, haranguing her from the sidewalk under her window, tempting her at the hallway incinerator. At last my grandmother gave in and agreed to try it. To this day I am not certain why. I am astonished that Mrs. Schuster should have succeeded in convincing her to have a Christian Scientist call, for I remember my grandmother as being unalterably opposed to Christianity in even its most innocuous manifestations. It was even a sin in her house to use the word "Jesus" as a swear word.

I have questioned my mother and aunts at length about this uncharacteristic lapse in my grandmother's immutable stubbornness. It is not that they are exactly reticent about the incident, but they are sufficiently vague to leave me with a feeling of suspicion, a feeling that her incurable illness had opened a tiny chink in her Eastern European armor, and with the desperation of the doomed she had permitted a little bit of Christianity to slip by parapets become nearly impregnable after two thousand years of assault.

The news of her capitulation struck our family like a thunderclap. My grandfather, as I remember, took it philosophically. He knew her too well, I suppose, to bother himself with any doubts about the possibility of her conversion from the faith of her ancestors. Among blood relations, however, there was deep consternation. Cousins I had never before seen traveled all the way from outlandish places like Greene Avenue and President Street to beg her to reconsider, but she was adamant. "A worry," she said, "he's going to eat me? Let him come. He's going to kill me? I'm not afraid of talk. He's going to kidnap me?"

Among her perennially embittered in-laws, however, the reaction was quite different. "The wise saint! The chochamah!" they said with malicious sarcasm. "Permitting a golach in her house. She's gone mad. Age has finally addled her brains."

Mrs. Schuster, however, rejoiced in her triumph. It was as if my grandmother's agreement had at last lent respectability to her own conversion. "Mrs. Slonimsky," she said, "is the wisest woman in Brighton Beach — in all Coney Island even — and she has finally seen the truth of Christian Science. God be with her! God be with her," she said, just as if she was born in Darien or Chappaqua.

It was entirely by chance that I witnessed the confrontation of my grandmother with the Christian Scientist. I had gone home earlier than usual that day to find a replacement for a ball my friend Lenny had hit up onto the tracks of the Brighton Line El. When I let myself into the apartment I noticed an unusual quiet. It was so quiet I could hear my sneakers hissing along the floor as I walked through the long hallway, toward the kitchen where my tennis ball lay hidden in an upper cupboard just behind the blue and white Jewish National Fund coin box, our unbreakable link with world Jewry. Usually I was an irrepressibly noisy boy but I responded to the stillness with a stillness of my own. The quiet hung like the odor of foreign cooking and I carefully moved the chair I was going to use as a stepladder to the cupboard.

All at once a sudden weakness came over me. It was as if the absence of family noises stirred some recondite fear of death that lurked somewhere beneath my youthful unwillingness to recognize its presence in my world of touch football, Flash Gordon chapters at the Tuxedo Movie Theatre, skelly, school, and cake and milk. She's dead, I thought. I left the chair where it was the moment the idea intruded into my consciousness. I took a small breath. I suddenly felt a dampness on the nape of my neck. I began walking, quiet as a sneak thief, toward my grandmother's room.

At her opened door I stopped. My hand shot back to the back of my neck and I wiped it clean of sweat with my stickball-grimy palm. I paused before taking that last half-step forward, feeling my heart stir in an unnatural rhythm. Then, as one preparing to look at a corpse for the first time, I squinted my eyes and stiffly canted my neck toward her window.

The sight startled me. My grandmother was seated in her accustomed place all right, but instead of looking toward the sea, her body was half-turned toward the wall, and facing her was a man. He was a man the likes of whom I had never seen before. He was boneless smooth and soft and round, a man fashioned from some rare, pure white clay. The idea crossed my mind that if I poked him his flesh might not rise back to its former place, but a deep hole would be left where my finger pressed into his body. His eyes were a lighter gray than our ocean and from beneath his thin blond hair shone a fearfully freckled scalp.

For some reason he frightened me. He had none of the jolly rosiness of our New York Irish or the moist brown look of our Semite-like Southern Italian neighbors. He was one hundred per cent American. Protestant American. The kind one saw only in the movies or in the financial district of Manhattan, but never expected to speak with. The kind that did not know what pastrami tasted like, and who strode with sure steps because this was his country and had been for a long, long time.

His shoes were brown and white and had little holes in them. Brown and white with little holes! Your family would have to live in America for generations; your great grandfathers would have had to have fought in the Revolutionary War and sailed in Lewis and Clark's canoes to wear shoes like those.

"Believe in God," he was saying, "Believe in God: you have no asthma. Believe in God: you have no asthma," he said again. It was a lilting incantation. His lips hardly moved as he said the words. His pudgy white fingers rested gently on my grandmother's hands which were extended, resting on a small table that stood between their chairs. She was staring at him, her eyes half-closed as if she was desperately trying to ingest the magic of his words, take them into her lungs and make them whole and young again. "Believe in God," he said again, "you have no asthma."

I studied my grandmother's face. Her expression was receptive, but I thought I could see a hint of reserve in the way her mouth was set and the way her pupils sparkled back the whiteness of her skin. It was the first time I could remember that her mouth and eyes did not reflect the punishing humor that had made her feared and famous. Her lips repeated silently what he said. Her mind, I thought, was opening to an alien God. "Believe in God," he repeated, "you have no asthma."

Suddenly there was a movement around his mouth and I caught a glimpse of orange beside the white gray of his lips as his false teeth slipped out of their accustomed place, garbling his prayer into something that sounded like, "Belieb imb Gob; youb hab nob asthmob." Obviously he had handled this emergency before, for without so much as a second's pause his tongue rolled and his neck snapped in a deft and successful movement to click his plates back into place. It was a click, a wet, red, salivary click.

My grandmother's eyes rolled full open. She caught what happened even before the false teeth were back in place. At once a hundred wrinkles burst around her eyes and a mocking hardness came into them. The man paused. He smiled in embarrassment, then set

There's nothing like
Old-fashioned Chelseas
...remember Grandma's?

When you bake at home it's much easier with Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast. There's less fuss, less preparation . . . and if you follow our recipes carefully, you'll never need to worry "will it work?" It will! And you'll feel so proud!

You'll need for the dough:
½ cup milk
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 tsp. salt
½ cup lukewarm water
1 tsp. granulated sugar
1 envelope Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast
1 egg, well beaten
3½ cups (about) once-sifted all-purpose flour
¼ cup soft shortening

for the filling and glaze:
soft butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine
¼ cup lightly-packed brown sugar
2 tsps. ground cinnamon
½ cup seedless raisins
⅓ cup lightly-packed brown sugar

1. Scald milk; stir in ¼ cup granulated sugar and salt. Cool to lukewarm.

2. Meantime, measure lukewarm water into large bowl and stir in 1 tsp. granulated sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir in lukewarm milk mixture, well-beaten egg, 2 cups of the flour and soft shortening. Beat until smooth and elastic. Work in remaining 1½ cups (about) flour.

3. Knead dough until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Grease top. Cover. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 1¼ hours.

4. Punch down dough. Knead until smooth. Halve dough and roll each half into a 9" square. Brush with soft butter or margarine. Combine ¼ cup brown sugar, cinnamon and seedless raisins; sprinkle over dough. Roll up jelly-roll fashion and cut each roll into 6 slices.

5. Melt 1 tbsp. butter or margarine in each of 2 loaf pans, brush sides of pans with fat and sprinkle ⅓ cup brown sugar in each pan. Place 6 rolls—cut sides up—in each pan. Grease tops. Cover. Let rise until doubled in bulk—about ½ hour. Bake in moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, about ½ hour. Makes 12 fragrant, delicious Chelsea buns, that will be snapped up by the family in no time.

Sukiyaki
SENSATION
OIL

The secret of world famous chefs! French and Chinese cooks use Planters Cooking and Salad Oil for frying, baking and salads. It imparts a crackling-crisp goodness to all fried foods . . . a superb lightness to baking . . . a delicate flavor to salad dressings. It's a polyunsaturated oil . . . so light, it floats on other oils.

SUKIYAKI SENSATION

3 tbsp. Planters Cooking and Salad Oil
1½ lbs. lean tender beefsteak, cut in paper-thin slivers
1 10-oz. package fresh spinach
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
1 cup thinly sliced celery
½ cup (1 bunch) thinly sliced scallions
1 tbsp. sugar
¼ cup soy sauce
2 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp. cornstarch
1 tbsp. cold water
Hot cooked rice

Heat Planters Oil in a large skillet and sauté beef slivers quickly until browned. Add spinach, mushrooms, celery, scallions, sugar, soy sauce, worcestershire sauce; sauté about 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Simmer about 5 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Blend cornstarch and water; stir into liquid in skillet. Cook and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Serve with hot rice. Serves 6.

Rabbi David Monson officiated at the funeral services, at College Memorial Chapel. Interment was at Yavne Zion Congregation Section, Bathurst Lawn Cemetery. Shiva was observed at the home.

Harry Margolian, of Yarmouth, N. S., died on Thursday, November 5, at the age of seventy-six years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Beatrice Margolian; a son, Samuel Margolian, 84 Whitmore Avenue; two daughters: Mrs. Leon Slan (Isabel), 517 Vesta Drive; Mrs. M. Wineberg (Florence), 574 Briar Hill Avenue; five grandchildren: Peter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Margolian; John, Ellen, and Anna, children of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Slan; Harris and Michael, children of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Wineberg; two brothers: Morris Margolian, of Fredericton, N. B., and of Montreal, Quebec; and Jack Margolian, of Saint John, N. B. Burial and shiva took place in Yarmouth.

Mrs. Camilla Goldstaub, 1372 Warden Avenue, died at the Baycrest Hospital, on September 17, at the age of seventy-five years. She was the widow of Adolphe Goldstaub; and is survived by a son, Eric Goldstaub, and Miss Jutta Goldstaub, both at home; three grandchildren, Danny, Ronald and Peggy, children of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Goldstaub; a sister, Mrs. Irma Beller, of New York; and a brother, Oscar Fiedler, 3 Old Meadow Lane. Rabbi Bernard Rosensweig officiated at the funeral services. Interment was at Dawes Road Cemetery. Shiva was observed at the home.

his mouth and heart to go on, but my grandmother silenced him with a flutter of her palm. She leaned forward painfully, her mouth a stiff-necked half smile. "Believe in God," she said, "you have teeth. Believe in God: you have teeth. Believe in God: you have teeth." She began to titter. "Believe in God, you have teeth." The titter became a crackle. "Believe in God: you have teeth." She was alternately tittering and cackling with delight. Her voice rose until it was a shrieking castigation: "Believe in God: you have teeth!"

Even my unsophisticated brain absorbed her logic. I saw the back of his neck begin to glow the red of an inflamed wound. The blush began to spread to his scalp which absorbed it as fast as a new blotter. "Believe in God: you have teeth," she said again; then suddenly gave herself over to a defiant, contemptuous silence. His shoulders, just a moment before so full and round with certainty, sagged a bit, forcing his hands to dart forward an inch or so. He looked at the floor, and emitted a long sigh, then staggered to his feet. Without risking another look at my grandmother he grabbed a black Bible from the window sill, turned and walked toward the door. He did not even see me there in his path, and just before we would have collided I stepped aside and he lurched by me down the hall and out the front door.

My grandmother, her smile vanishing gradually, stared directly ahead for some moments and then suddenly began to gasp for breath. Without waiting for the fit to subside she rose from her chair and began struggling to open the window. Succeeding she fell back into her chair and once again began to breathe in the salt breeze from the sea. Three days later she was dead.

JUDAISM OF THE EDUCATED HEART: ABOUT —DR. KAPLAN'S NEW BOOK

Few of us realize that we are passing through the most profound and disturbing revolution that mankind has ever faced in its long, tortuous history, the scientific revolution. Every nook and corner of our physical, political, social, economic, literary, artistic, and religious life has been thrown into a confusion that nears chaos and may end in the death of our planet. At a moment like this we need open eyes that face the realities, the rough, harsh, overwhelming realities of life. We need not men who lapse into dreamy states and utter mellifluous, meaningless words. We dare not trust an automobile in the hands of such irresponsibility. We need man's one Divine gift, his intelligence, his reason, his open-eyed awareness, if he is not to destroy himself and his world.

Here lies the value of Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan's latest volume, "The Purpose And Meaning Of Jewish Existence." For many years now, Dr. Kaplan alone has been opening the eyes of the Jewish intelligentsia to the challenging revolution that has struck our century and the foundations of Jewish life. In this volume, he goes to the very heart of the whole matter and asks the one question that involves the survival of the Jewish people: What is the purpose, what is the meaning of Jewish existence?

Nature and history have a way of discarding nations and peoples that have lost their purpose and meaning. Nature and history have no pity on the useless and the meaningless; they sweep such peoples into the dust-bins of the past. Unless each Jew can find some purpose and meaning in his Jewish life, he will abandon it as many of our Jewish youth are actually doing to-day.

And unless the Jewish people throughout the Diaspora, and even in Israel, find a purpose and meaning, a rationale, for continuing the struggle to survive, the Jewish people must disappear or be so metamorphosed as to be unrecognizable just as the Greeks and the Italians of today have no relationship with the Greeks of Athens and the Romans of classical Rome, peoples who in their time shaped the destiny of Europe and who influenced the history of mankind.

The book is divided into three sections. The core of the book, its middle section, is a resumé of the great work on Jewish philosophy which Hermann Cohen wrote earlier in this century, under the title of "The Religion Of Reason." Dr. Kaplan analyzes this book, summarizes it, and offers his own comments at every step. This is preceded by a discussion of other interpreters of Judaism who preceded Hermann Cohen. Two of these are Philo and Maimonides. The third section of the book contains a discussion of those who interpreted Judaism after Hermann Cohen. Martin Buber is offered as an example of the esoteric interpretation, and Dr. Kaplan's view of Judaism as a civilization are offered as the rationalistic interpretation.

"The Purpose And Meaning Of Jewish Existence" is not just another book about Judaism. It may prove to be Dr. Kaplan's greatest contribution to the Jewish people that he loves and to the Judaism he wants to play its part in this revolutionary age.

From first page to last, he has crowded it with brilliant insights that would reconstruct the Jewish People in the image of God and make of Judaism a vital and intelligible religion of the "Educated Heart."

STATEMENT ON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A ZIONIST FEDERATION IN CANADA TOWARD REVITALIZING CANADIAN ZIONISM

At a meeting held in Montreal on November 8, representatives of the Labor Zionist Movement of Canada; Misrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi; Aehdut Ha-Avoda; and Friends of Pioneering Israel-Mapam decided to issue the following statement:

For a number of years we have been disturbed by the serious problems besetting Canadian Zionism. It has been our consistent conviction that a more forceful and concrete projection of Zionist ideals is essential for the growth of the Zionist Movement and that this goal can only be achieved through the united action of all Zionist groups.

The precise framework of Zionist unity has been of secondary interest to us. Many attempts were made on our part to transform the United Zionist Council into a meaningful instrument for the achievement of this purpose. These efforts failed, however, through no fault of ours.

Because of our concern with Zionist unity regardless of framework we accepted, three years ago, the invitation of the president of the Zionist Organization of Canada to designate representatives of our respective organizations for co-option to the National Executive Board of the Z.O.C. We interpreted this action on the part of the Zionist Organization of Canada as an indication of willingness to transform the Z.O.C. into a truly representative body reflecting the participation of the entire Zionist family.

Subsequently, further negotiations took place with the leadership of the Zionist Organization of Canada towards the more active participation of the various Zionist groups within the framework of the Z.O.C. On February 25, 1963, a meeting took place with representatives of the Zionist Organization at which it was agreed, according to the official minutes of the meeting, that "One person from each party would sit on the national officers committee of the Z.O.C." It was also the consensus of opinion at the meeting that "in due course the Z.O.C. should publicly declare itself a (Zionist) Territorial Organization open to all Canadian Zionists".

It should be clear from these facts that in asking the 87th national convention of the Z.O.C., which took place several weeks ago, to amend the Constitution of the Z.O.C. in order to recognize the presence of and representation by all Zionist groups within the Zionist Organization we were not springing any surprises. We were merely asking for constitutional recognition of the de facto situation. Moreover, our amendments were submitted to the chairman of the Constitution Committee prior to the Convention and we attempted to initiate discussions regarding these amendments with the leadership of the Z.O.C. during the course of the convention.

We would see no logic in the position of the Z.O.C. in recognizing the right of all groups to designate representatives on the National Executive Board of the Z.O.C. and on its Officers Committee and then leaving it to the whim of such new administration to coopt these representatives as individuals. It is unjust to the thousands of committed, dues-paying Zionists whom we represent to relegate them to second-class citizenship in the Z.O.C.

Unfortunately, the convention was not prepared to legalize the status of the various Zionist groups within the Z.O.C. Because of this decision, and particularly because of the manner in which it was made, we felt that we no longer had any place either at the Convention or in the structure of the Z.O.C.

For these reasons we are reluctantly compelled to take action towards the establishment of a Zionist Federation in Canada in accordance with the Constitution of the World Zionist Organization and with decisions of the 25th World Zionist Congress. This Federation will be open to all Zionist groups, including the Z.O.C. It will also be open to all organizations and individuals who are willing to subscribe to the program of the World Zionist Organization.

Such a democratically constituted Federation, in our view, will be able to revitalize Canadian Zionism and expand the achievements of the Zionist Movement in the fields of aliya (immigration), Youth, Jewish education, and community leadership. We are confident that our efforts in this direction will be recognized by the World Zionist Organization and that we will receive broad community support here in Canada.

Social Agency Services To Adoptive Parents

By David Weiss, executive director of the Baron de Hirsch Institute Jewish Child Welfare Bureau, of Montreal

Childless couples who seek to become parents through adoption, should be referred to recognized and approved social agencies for this purpose. The community recognizes legally and socially the validity of adoption as a method by which couples can achieve family life, and therefore provides the safeguards and protection for all parties involved through an accredited social agency. The adoption agency usually deals with such requests through a process known as social casework and employs professionally trained social workers to administer this service.

The social agency appreciates that adoptive applicants are human beings whose needs and motivations are important, both to them and to a future child, should adoption be decided upon. The adoptive applicants also need an experience with the agency through which they can explore, test out, and clarify their apparent and underlying wishes, concerns and interests in becoming parents. In this way, the applicants and the agency, on behalf of the potential adopted child, are able to arrive at mutually agreed upon decisions which will have lifelong meaning.

The adoption agency as a rule is set-up under private or public auspices by law or charter, and has requirements and eligibility rules which help to determine whether or not couples may be considered beyond the initial request. The agencies may represent sectarian and denominational interests and, in consequence be restricted in relation to certain questions such as religion, age, residence, and other legal requirements, all of which are important facts if adoption is to be effectively promoted, and legally consummated.

The social agency has two major concerns in studying adoptive applicants: to ascertain whether or not such couples offer the possibility and opportunity for the child to be placed and raised successfully, and to help such couples to understand whether adoption will meet their needs to become parents in a manner which will serve as a healthy, growthful experience.

This process is known as casework and is usually based on a family study in which frequent and regular interviews on a confidential basis are established. The agency wants to know if the applicants are capable of becoming parents who can meet the needs of a given adopted child; and the kind of child for whom they will be best suited. Such a study experience can offer the adoptive applicants a means by which they can grow in understanding of one another and their roles as parents. During the course of such studies, either the agency or the adoptive applicants may decide that adoption is not indicated, or desired, or would not meet the specific emotional needs of the couple.

The social agency will usually clarify and communicate decisions at every step of the study. In this way, false hopes, real or unreal expectations can be dealt with in a shared way. The agency will also explain the reasons for necessary delays brought about by the fact that in most localities there are more applicants for children than children available for such placement.

The modern adoption agency will base its decision on a comprehensive evaluation of the marital relationship, the meaning of adoption to each spouse, and the apparent and underlying motivations they present in this plan. The social agency staff will include the caseworker, medical, psychiatric, and psychological consultants who will participate in achieving the most objective understanding of the given applicants, so that an objective, humane decision will be arrived at for the benefit of child and couple.

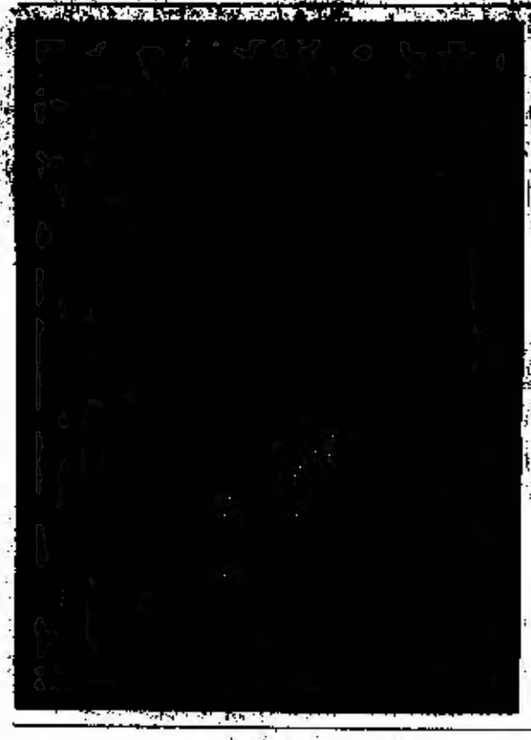
Just as the adoptive applicants will want to know, and have a right to know, as much about the potential child that may be available to them, so too does the social agency want to know all about the applicants, since the future welfare of the child in its care is at stake.

How does the couple function; how mature are they emotionally and socially? Can they really grow into parenthood? Is there capacity to handle disappointments and frustrations, flexibility to change in relation to meeting the needs of others? Do they have the ability to give love, guidance, and reasonable protection and family stability to a child?

These and other criteria are usually considered in relation to the diagnosis which the social agency seeks to make in working with the adoptive applicants. Conversely, such applicants usually grow into an awareness and acceptance of their real basic drives toward fulfilling their wish for parenthood through adoption. This experience therefore is meaningful not only in respect to the specific needs which brings these applicants to the social agency, but has long-term value in enhancing and deepening their ability and capacity to relate to children and to themselves.

The agency thus finds the best possible homes for the limited number of children they have available for adoption. The agency cannot meet all requests because not all applicants really want such a solution to their childlessness, nor can the agency consider placing children in order to rebuild marriages, to provide the therapeutic tools, as it were, of a child to help individuals overcome severe disturbances or unstable marriages.

When the applicant and the agency truly relate to each other in respect to their need, there is movement toward the fulfillment of the need and mutual understanding which serves the best interest of the child, the adoptive applicants, and the community by providing a secure family life for an otherwise unwanted child whose placement creates a new family unit in society.



Mr. Justice Gerald Fauteux, of Montreal, Chancellor of the University of Montreal, will be guest speaker at the annual dinner of the Montreal Chapter of the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University, on December 6, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. EICHMANN CHIEF PROSECUTOR CREDITS JEWS IN GHETTOS AND CAMPS WITH INCREDIBLE BRAVERY

"Numbing horror and incredulous disbelief" was the general reaction of the great masses of Eastern and Central Europeans, both Jewish and non-Jewish, to the mass murders of the Nazi annihilation program during World War II, according to Gideon Hausner, former Attorney General of Israel who was the chief prosecutor at the Eichmann trial in Israel. Speaking at the Herzl Institute, in New York, Mr. Hausner was bitter in his attack on "some vicious, originality-seeking authors" who attributed cowardice or the urge for self-destruction to those Nazi victims who did not organize resistance against the Nazis. (Though he didn't mention Hannah Ahrendt by name, it was obvious that Mr. Hausner was referring to the author of "Eichmann in Jerusalem: A Report on the Banality of Evil.")

A careful study of contemporary diaries of Polish underground leaders and Soviet prisoners of war, Mr. Hausner said, reveals that the reaction of the great majority of the Nazi victims was of disbelief and a numbing horror that almost paralyzed them in the face of Nazi extermination. Stating that over a million and a quarter Russian prisoners of war, the flower of Soviet youth, were annihilated by direct shooting, Mr. Hauser said: "Yet with the exception of one sad and pathetic report of resistance by forty-eight disabled soldiers, not one of them used the shovel with which he was told to dig his own grave to assail the S.S. guards."

But it occurred to nobody to attribute cowardice to them, or the will for self-destruction, until the publication recently of books on the subject of the lack of anti-Nazi resistance and alleged collaboration of Ghetto Councils.

Speaking about Jewish resistance, Mr. Hausner reported that the evidence shows that there were hundreds of spontaneous nests of Jewish underground activity which flared up in communities all over occupied Europe. Without benefit of advice from Governments-in-Exile to give them a central command, the only group so leaderless, these Jewish resistance pockets were the only ones who "went into open and over-all action when there were no relieving armies in sight. Their only possible gain was the saving of Jewish honor. They all faced a tragic and fateful decision, since their going into action automatically carried with it the immediate wiping out of a whole community. So they postponed their open revolt until the last moment. The Warsaw Ghetto revolt was the crowning symbol of this movement, but historically, it was certainly only one of many inspired rebellions."

Stating that Jewish masses, as well as other groups of doomed people, refused to believe that they were doomed, as they were told by inspired underground leaders, Mr. Hausner asked: "Who can blame them for refusing to believe in the return of the jungle?"

In summing up the matter of Jewish resistance, Mr. Hausner said: "The records prove that the doomed Jews of Europe have nothing of which to be ashamed. There was often close cooperation between the oft-besmirched Ghetto Councils and the Jewish resistance leaders. There were over a million and a quarter Jews in the armed camps that fought Hitler. Jews took an active part in the general resistance movement, when they were allowed to participate. And the ghetto rebellions were exclusively Jewish. There is evidence of unbelievable acts of bravery on the part of Jewish individuals and groups in the ghettos and the extermination camps."
